Video of Roslindale 'terror suspect' released to public

Grainy. The footage of the shooting of Usaama Rahim outside a CVS is inconclusive.

A grainy video with raindrops on the lens shows the fatal standoff between law enforcement and Usaama Rahim, the man who brought a knife to a gunfight one week ago at a Roslindale bus stop.

On Monday, Suffolk County District Attorney Dan Conley, Boston Police Commissioner Bill Evans and FBI Agent Vincent Lisi showed the surveillance footage captured from a Burger King some 50 yards away from the shooting.

In the video, one Boston police detective and five FBI agents, dressed in plain clothes and with their weapons not yet drawn, converge on Rahim as he stood at a bus stop. The law enforcement officials are seen backing away from Rahim.

It is here that authorities say Rahim was instructed to put down a knife he was wielding. A police cruiser is seen turning on his lights on Washington Street. The BPD detective and an FBI agent opened fire, fatally striking Rahim in the shoulder, upper piece of evidence among many, and the investigation is still very active," Conley said. "I haven't made any findings yet or come to any legal conclusions. This is an exacting process and it requires a careful analysis of all the evidence in light of state and federal case law. A great deal of work still needs to be done, and this process is too important to rush."

Rahim, 26, is said to have adopted radical Islamic beliefs and sought to behead a member of "the boys in blue" with a Marine Bowie knife. He was under 24/7 surveillance from a joint terrorism task force.

The Lechmere MBTA station will soon be rebuilt as part of the Green Line extension. At bottom is a rendering of the proposed station. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

T. Green Line gets green light despite T in the red

Despite being billions in debt, the MBTA is moving forward to expand the Green Line nearly five miles, or about one mile for every $2 billion the T is currently in the hole.

While the project involves what MBTA spokesman Joe Pesaturo calls four "overlapping" phases, the most noticeable element of the Green Line Extension (GLX) is currently the moving of Lechmere Station from one side of Monsignor O'Brien Highway to the other.

Though the East Cambridge station that currently marks the northern end of the Green Line is named for a store that went out of business decades ago and is rumored to have been intended as a "temporary" station from the start, Lechmere is in the process of becoming a gateway to other suburbs.

According to the T, the expansion is justified by the traffic increases that were brought on by the Big Dig and is going forward despite the T's crushing debt and complaints about the existing system by riders who suggest fixing what is broken before adding to it.

"The station is old," said one rider, "but so is the entire system. We need to fix what we have first before we add to it."

Many who live and work in the areas that will now be reached, however, are excited about the transformation of the 1922 station into a sparkling new fully accessible glass-and-steel edifice that will serve as a gateway to Somerville and Medford. MATT ROBINSON

Fatal hit-and-run

Man accused of fatal Mattapan hit-and-run arraigned on $500K bail

A Dorchester man was held on $500,000 bail after a horrendous hit-and-run accident that killed an 8-year-old girl and injured a 12-year-old boy Saturday night in Mattapan.

James Horton, 45, was charged with vehicular homicide and leaving the scene of an accident after allegedly fleeing from the West Selden Street accident that killed Yadielys Deleon Camacho.

Camacho, who was in the second grade at the Up Academy in Dorchester, was killed and her 12-year-old cousin injured as they rode bicycles while playing outside their grandmother's birthday celebration, The Boston Globe reported.

Both Horton's and Camacho's families attended the court hearing Monday, which turned into an emotional session at various points of the hearing. Throughout the hearing, the mother, Yalitza Camacho, clutched a stuffed animal and was heard yelling out in Spanish between tears.

The district attorney's office said Horton must wear a GPS device if he is released prior to trial. Horton is next due in court on July 13. KEELA SWEENEY

Guilty. Alemany convicted of murder, kidnapping

Edwin Alemany was convicted of first-degree murder on Monday for the 2013 kidnapping and murder of 24-year-old Wilbraham resident Amy Lord.

The defense attorney for Alemany had tried to convince a Suffolk County jury to consider him not guilty by reason of insanity. The jury didn't buy it and delivered their verdict on the first day back from the weekend.

Alemany, 30, stands guilty of first-degree murder, kidnapping, armed carjacking, arson and several counts of robbery. He was found not guilty of assault to rape.

Alemany attacked Lord on Dorchester Street as she headed to a gym about 6 a.m. on July 23, 2013, dragging her back to her apartment where he continued to beat her before forcing her into her car to withdraw money from five ATMs.

At 8:40 that morning, Lord's Jeep Cherokee was found set ablaze in Southie. A bicyclist found Lord's body in the Stony Brook Reservation in Hyde Park later that evening.

His attorney, Jeffery Denner, asked the jury see these crimes as the behavior of a mentally ill man who had been in and out of psychiatric hospitals and has been on anti-psychotic medication for years.

License lawsuit

State may restart casino process closer to Boston

Boston Mayor Marty Walsh, who is waging a legal battle against state gambling regulators, said Monday that the state may have to push the reset button on licensing a resort casino in eastern Massachusetts.

The Massachusetts Gaming Commission in Sept. 2014 awarded the casino license for eastern Massachusetts, also known as "Region A," to Wynn Resorts, which is seeking to build a casino in Everett.

Walsh is suing the Gaming Commission, arguing the license should be nullified, the existing commissioners should be disqualified, and Boston should be recognized as a host community for the casino because the facility would be accessed through Boston. The commission chose Wynn over a proposal for a casino in Revere that would have been developed by Mohegan Sun. SHNS

Officer suspended after throwing girl to the ground, pointing gun Policing. The video of the incident has gone viral on social media sites.

A Dallas-area policeman has been placed on administrative leave after a video surfaced on social media that showed him throwing a bathing-suit-clad girl to the ground and drawing a gun on another at a pool party disturbance, officials said on Sunday.

"This video has raised concerns that are being investigated," the police department in McKinney, a city about 30 miles north of Dallas, said on Sunday.

The incident occurred on Friday and raised questions on social media about racial bias in policing since most of the people targeted by the officer, who appears in the video to be white, were black teens in a multi-race crowd.

In the video, the officer, Eric Casebolt, is seen shouting obscenities at the teens and placing a black youth in handcuffs.

Another officer, who also appears to be white, is seen engaging with some of the teens in a cordial manner.

"Having seen the YouTube video, I am disturbed and concerned by the incident and actions depicted in the video," McKinney Mayor Brian Loughmiller said in a written statement.

"Our expectation as a city council is that our police department and other departments will act professionally and with appropriate restraint relative to the situation they are faced with," he said.

McKinney police said officers were responding to a disturbance reported at a pool that is part of a residential community and many in the crowd refused to leave.

Man pleads guilty to plotting suicide bomb attack on Kansas airport

A man accused of plotting a suicide bomb attack at a Wichita, Kansas, airport in 2013 pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court to a charge of attempted use of a weapon of mass destruction.

Terry Loewen, 59, was arrested trying to enter the tarmac at the airport with what he believed was a vehicle loaded with explosives, with a plan to trigger the device next to a terminal and die in the blast, according to a criminal complaint.

A plea agreement calls for Loewen to be sentenced to 20 years in prison followed by lifetime supervision. U.S. District Judge Monti Belot set sentencing for Aug. 31.

"Terry Loewen utilized his privileged airport access to attempt a terrorist attack in Wichita," Assistant Attorney General John Carlin said in a news release. "Detecting, disrupting and holding accountable those who wish to harm Americans remains our highest priority."

Loewen was indicted in December 2013 on three charges and told the court on Friday he planned to change his plea from not guilty.

Charges of attempted use of an explosive and attempting to provide material support to a designated foreign terrorist organization were dropped under the agreement. REUTERS

Three things to know

SC ex-police officer indicted in death of black man

A grand jury on Monday indicted a white former police officer on a murder charge for the shooting death of a black man in North Charleston, South Carolina, the prosecutor overseeing the case said.

Michael Slager, 33, was fired from his patrolman job after being charged with murder in the April 4 death of Walter Scott, 50, who was fatally shot in the back as he ran from Slager following a traffic stop.

Video of the shooting captured by a bystander on his cellphone was widely distributed, and the death reignited a public outcry over police treatment of African-Americans.

Florida doctor tied to Senator Menendez corruption case to have bail set

A Florida doctor accused of giving lavish gifts to U.S. Senator Robert Menendez in a corruption case was due back in federal court Monday to have bail set on separate Medicare fraud charges.

Salomon Melgen faces 76 counts of Medicare fraud and falsifying medical records and has remained in jail since his indictment in April. He has pleaded not guilty.

District Judge Kenneth Marra ruled on Friday that Melgen could be granted bail as long as a series of strict conditions were met, including home detention, electronic monitoring and no access to boats or planes. REUTERS

Worst US bird flu outbreak in history expands to Michigan

Michigan on Monday said Canadian geese in the state tested positive for a lethal strain of bird flu, bringing the worst outbreak of the disease in U.S. history to a 21st state.

Three young geese collected in Sterling Heights, Michigan, about 20 miles north of Detroit, were infected with the highly pathogenic H5N2 flu strain, according to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. The state is now focusing on preventing the spread of the disease to poultry, Director Keith Creagh said.

1 Awesome teen Lourdes Leon snubs Kylie Jenner

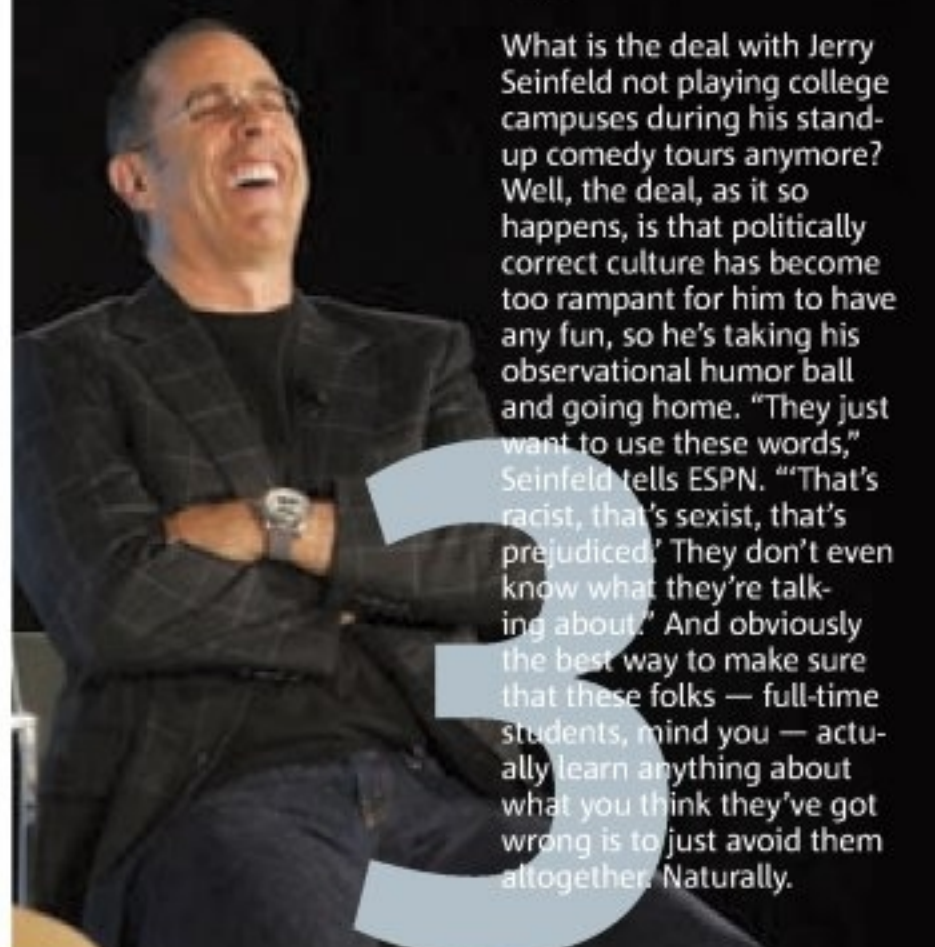

Lourdes refuses to stoop down to Kylie's level. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Lourdes Leon appears to have inherited a good deal from mom Madonna. Case in point: She apparently has both impeccable taste and no time for mincing words. Word is that 17-year-old Kylie Jenner recently reached out to the 18-year-old Leon to suggest that they totally, like, hang, but Leon was all, whatever. "Lourdes was horrified. She thinks Kylie and her sisters are vile and has made a big effort to avoid being in the same room as any of them," a source says, according to Star magazine. "She couldn't believe Kylie thought she'd be receptive to a party invite and has completely ignored her. As far as Lourdes is concerned, she's not going to lower herself to even responding." Not to worry, young lady, the tabloids are happy to do it for you.

Jerry Seinfeld is done with college kids

What is the deal with Jerry Seinfeld not playing college campuses during his stand-up comedy tours anymore? Well, the deal, as it so happens, is that politically correct culture has become too rampant for him to have any fun, so he's taking his observational humor ball and going home. "They just want to use these words," Seinfeld tells ESPN. "That's racist, that's sexist, that's prejudiced! They don't even know what they're talking about." And obviously the best way to make sure that these folks — full-time students, mind you — actually learn anything about what you think they've got wrong is to just avoid them altogether. Naturally.

See? She's fine.

Dina Lohan says Lindsay is doing great

Lindsay Lohan has finally — finally! — completed her eight long years of probation, and she's already been spotted celebrating that milestone with a nice glass of red wine in Venice, Italy. But if you're concerned about the "Mean Girls" star's notoriously tricky relationship with alcohol leading her down yet another dark path, don't be. No less a reliable source than her own mom, Dina Lohan, assures Radar Online — and the world at large — that Lindsay is super, thanks for asking. "She's happier than ever," Dina exclaims, adding that yet another attempted comeback for her daughter could be right around the corner as Lindsay is "getting movie offers left and right." And why would her own mother exaggerate?

Kate Moss, model air passenger

Kate Moss is showing no signs of mellowing, that's for sure. Moss was escorted off an EasyJet flight from Turkey to London recently for becoming unruly and disruptive after being denied a cocktail by the crew. "She called the pilot a 'basic bitch' as police led her off the plane," a source tells the Daily Mail. "She was a little drunk and had a disagreement with another passenger on the flight as she was refused alcohol and went to serve her own vodka from her cabin luggage." Ever resourceful, that Moss. Most shocking, though, is that she was flying EasyJet, which is basically Europe's version of Southwest. Oh, how the mighty models have fallen.

DAENERYS RIDES A DRAGON AND ARYA BREAKS THE RULES

"The Dance of Dragons" delivered dramatic fireworks worthy of the show's reputation for barn-burning penultimate episodes. It was a good night of TV.

Episode MVPs

People watch "Game of Thrones" for a lot of reasons — the complicated political plots, the well-developed characters, the shocking deaths — but this past Sunday's episode succeeded for a pretty simple reason: Daenerys Targaryen rode a dragon. Fans were there when her dragons were born, and they've waited patiently as they grew over the past few seasons. "The Dance of Dragons" paid off several years' worth of growing pains and proved that the show can satisfy on the basis of spectacle alone.

Not that spectacle was the only thing the episode had going for it. In a season that's been called out for a number of disturbing scenes, "The Dance of Dragons" featured one of the most unsettling sequences to ever appear on the show. God, hoping that it would clear a path to victory. Putting children in danger is always a risky move, and by killing Shireen, "Game of Thrones" proved once again that it's willing to commit to risky ideas. Just when audiences thought they'd seen everything, the show found another way to shock them.

Our watch for next week begins

This week, Jon Snow returned to the Wall with several thousand wildlings in tow. His fellow Night's Watchmen were not pleased, so look for that conflict to boil over next week. Meanwhile, Arya skipped out on her assassination assignment to confront an old enemy. She'll likely face some consequences.

"Game of Thrones" has picked up a ton of steam over the past few weeks and shows no signs of slowing down. If the season finale can capitalize on the momentum from this episode, it'll be one to remember.

Location shooting

The show will return to Spain to film parts of Season 6

This year, "Game of Thrones" used the Royal Alcazar of Seville to stand in for the Water Gardens of Dorne, one of Season 5's most striking new locations. For Season 6, the show is staying in Spain and will film in the cities of Girona and Peniscola. Although it's unconfirmed, rumor has it that these cities may double for Oldtown and Casterly Rock, two Westerosi locales we've heard about but have yet to visit in the world of the TV show.

Dermot Mulroney can scare easily

Dermot Mulroney confers with director Leigh Whannell while shooting the third "Insidious." / MATT KENNEDY

Q&A. The actor's son was more excited he was in "Insidious" than when he worked with Meryl Streep.

Dermot Mulroney gets around, doing rom-coms ("My Best Friend's Wedding"), dramas ("August: Osage County") and indies ("Living in Oblivion"). With "Insidious: Chapter 3," he adds horror to his repertoire. In this threequel/prequel, Mulroney plays the dad of a teen (Stefanie Scott) haunted by a demon, trying to save her with the help of the franchise's token psychic, Elise (Lin Shaye).

You said that the previous movies terrified you. Are you difficult to frighten? I was sure that I would have to invent how to be scared in this movie. I thought I would have to really act and work really hard. But when I got on the set, it was dark and quiet, and there was creepy music. The director created an environment that caused me to feel actually really scared. So it was much easier than I thought.

Did you have any nightmares after filming?

I didn't stay scared after I left work. But one of the first days on the set, I came to work and saw the man who plays the bad guy. He had very elaborate wardrobe and makeup. And in fact, the demon he played represents illness and death. But I didn't expect to see him, so when I turned around and saw the man in the special effects makeup was just standing in the dark corner of the set and doing nothing, it was very frightening. And even as I tell you this, I kind of get goose bumps on my arm.

Do you watch horror movies?

I do watch them. I have a teenage son, so I have seen some of the movies recently — "Paranormal Activity," "The Purge" and "Evil Dead." And I have to take my son to them, so he can get into the movie. [Laughs] I was excited to try one for myself because I have only been in a few other movies that might be considered horrors. I love "Stoker" very much, but it's more like a murder movie.

Was your son excited to know that you were starring in "Insidious"?

Yeah. You know, when I told him that I was about to work with Meryl Streep on "August: Osage County," he was not very excited. When I told him I was doing "Insidious," he freaked out. He couldn't believe it. He instantly took out his cellphone and texted all of his friends, "My father gonna be in 'Insidious: Chapter 3.'" Horror fans are a very fun group of people.

One more thing

Being with Julia

You are famous for "My Best Friend's Wedding." Why do you think your character chose Cameron Diaz and not Julia Roberts? I can't say why. It's a reason why this film became a classic, and why it's stayed relevant all these years later. Some movies I've done get kind of old and dated, but this one still plays the same way. And I think the reason why it's so good is because the girl doesn't get the guy. It drives people crazy. I think that is why this movie remains so popular.

The National Society of High School Scholars has released its annual millennial career survey. (Spoiler alert: Kids these days — they want to work at Google.)

Now in its eighth year, the survey, conducted by Hanover Research, polls more than 18,000 high school students, college students and young professionals about their career and education goals.

"We have a group of diverse scholars — students who are high achievers, who want to excel in life," says NSHSS President James

So, what do millennials want? More science and tech jobs, for one. Students ranked Google as their No.

"There's been a big push in the educational system and the media in terms of science, technology and engineering careers," says Beth Pann, vice president of NSHSS. "And kids are listening. Not just because these careers pay well, but because they want to make a difference too."

But if millennials are increasingly plugged in, they're also far more worldly and multicultural than their forebears. "Forty-one percent are fluent in a language other than English," marvels Lewis. "While immigration is a big reason [for this], I think it also speaks to the fact that a lot of these young scholars are looking at the entire globe as their workplace."

"The world is changing and becoming a smaller place," Lewis adds. "Millennials are more exposed to people of different backgrounds. To them, diversity is not just about ethnicity and cultures

Founded in 1889 as a club for practicing architects in the local Boston area, the BAC has remained closely tied to the professional design community throughout its history. These connections allow the College to uphold its founding principles of integrated design education. The College's faculty are both teachers and practicing professionals, maintaining the BAC's commitment to combining academic and experiential, practice-based learning.

Through the BAC's dynamic learning model, students acquire academic knowledge in the classroom while receiving applied learning through practical experiences in the field. This trajectory helps students make connections between theoretical and practical approaches and equips them with necessary tools for solving complex projects and design parameters for today's global and diverse communities.

The BAC offers programs that uphold this integrated model of combining academics and practice. In all programs, students draw upon their academic studies and their daily workplace or community project learning as they develop their understandings and abilities in their field of study. Students think critically about sustainable design, social and cultural contexts, and their own developing identity as designers.

In pursuit of a bigger booty wellbeing

For any cosmetic surgery, "if the price is too good to be true, it's too good to be true," says Pfeifer. GETTY IMAGES

How to know your doctor is legit

Even in the proper setting and in the right hands, the procedure is not without risks. "People should understand that even as a plastic surgeon injecting fat into the buttocks, we have to be very careful," Pfeifer says. "Nothing is foolproof."

Controlling for risk factors is about more than having careful knowledge of anatomy, a sterile operating room and experience with the tools and materials used in the procedure. If something goes wrong, such as a blood clot, "it's immediate, and you have to know how to save that person's life."

Each state has an online database of licensed plastic and cosmetic surgeons; specifically, seek out a doctor certified by the American Board of Plastic Surgery. "Also, look to see what professional societies the doctor belongs to," Pfeifer advises. "If a doctor is certified with American Society for Aesthetic Plastic Surgery, the doctor is board-certified."

We asked a plastic surgeon how to boost the junk in our trunk — safely.

We all do strange things in the name of beauty, but there are lines that shouldn't be crossed. The latest tragedy came last week, when 34-year-old Kelly Mayhew died after getting silicone injections to enlarge her butt in a New York City basement.

Butt augmentation is one of the fastest-growing aesthetic procedures, increasing 86 percent from 2013 to 2014, according to the American Society for Aesthetic Plastic Surgery. The trend overlaps with the rising popularity of ample-bootied stars like Kim Kardashian and Nicki Minaj, driving many young women, mostly in their 20s, to seek out some enhancements of their own.

What went wrong in Mayhew's case was the use of free-floating silicone, according to Dr. Tracy Pfeifer, a member of the American Society for Aesthetic Plastic Surgery and a certified plastic surgeon. "We never inject silicone, ever," says Pfeifer.

The practice of injecting free silicone to enhance a body part has been around since the 1940s and '50s, according to Pfeifer. However, "it is not anything doctors would do" and can lead to deformity and worse.

"Sometimes, it is used on something like an acne scar, but it's only a small drop," she explains.

When done correctly, butt enhancement "is a straightforward procedure," says Pfeifer. The two most common methods are fat redistribution, in which fat is taken from elsewhere in the body (usually the waist and thighs) and added to enhance the size and shape of the butt, or implants, as done in breast enhancements, inserted through a small incision.

For recovery time, whichever method you choose, you're looking at a lot of soreness and up to two weeks of no downtime: "You can sleep on your side, and you're not going to sit on your bottom for a week or two," Pfeifer says.

Expect to pay between $4,000 and $8,000 for a professional butt enhancement. Financing is available — aesthetic surgeons use a service called CareCredit. "If the price is too good to be true, it's too good to be true," Pfeifer cautions. "What is your life worth?"

Letters to the editor

Don't villainize sex work

Re: Don't glorify bad jobs (Metro, June 9) Jobs in the sex industry — including escorting, stripping, webcamming, prostitution and more — are perfectly honorable professions. People working in the sex industry are contributing to society by providing services to people who want them, providing people with companionship, sexual release and an outlet to explore their desires. So many jobs that are glorified by society actually have harmful consequences. For example, people working in the financial sector likely contribute to increasing wealth disparities, and those working in real estate often contribute to raising rent costs. What makes sex work "bad" compared to jobs that are considered more acceptable, despite the negative impact they have on society? Villainizing sex workers just contributes to taboos that keep sex work unregulated and result in unsafe working conditions. Rather than blaming sex workers for engaging in work that pays their bills, we should acknowledge the reality that sex work exists because many people pay sex workers for their services. We need to expand workplace protections to better help and support those working in the sex industry.

Spikes always sketchy

NFL. The now-former Patriots linebacker just could never follow the "Patriot way" he spoke so highly of.

In May, many Patriots fans were stunned that Bill Belichick was bringing back linebacker Brandon Spikes. Spikes had bad-mouthed the organization on the way out in his first stint with the team, and typically Belichick has no problem burning bridges with mouthy malcontents. Plus, there were plenty of other odd—but not criminal—Spikes incidents prior to his anti-Patriots rants.

In 2010, an amateur porn video featuring Spikes receiving oral pleasure from a Kim Kardashian look-alike popped up online. This came shortly after then-Boston Celtics head coach Doc Rivers praised Spikes as a "great young man" upon the Patriots drafting him. Spikes was dating Rivers' daughter, Callie, at the time as the two had met at the University of Florida.

During this time period, UF wasn't yet viewed as "U of Miami lite." Milk and cookies Tim Tebow was the star of those late 2000s teams, after all, and Aaron Hernandez had not yet emerged as Connecticut's answer to Tony Soprano. Head coach Urban Meyer, for all intents and purposes,

21 days

Just 21 days after Brandon Spikes was re-signed by the Patriots, the team released him following a bizarre incident involving an abandoned car.

- A 2011 Mercedes Maybach registered to Spikes was found abandoned and with front-end damage on I-495 in Foxboro around 3:30 a.m. Sunday. The driver of the car reported hitting a deer around that time, according to OnStar.
- State police said that a crash occurred around the same time and around the same location. All three occupants of a 2009 Nissan Murano, a 51-year-old man, a 32-year-old woman and a 12-year-old boy, were transported to the hospital after their car was reportedly rear-ended by another vehicle. None of the injuries were said to be life-threatening.

Brandon Spikes is again a free agent. / GETTY IMAGES was simply running a clean, successful program.

Spikes always wore his Gators pride on his sleeve, right up through this April when Hernandez was convicted of murdering Odin Lloyd. Spikes tweeted out minutes after the verdict in the case, "IM CONFUSED ABOUT THE JUSTICE SYSTEM THESE DAYS!!!"

Second chance wasted

Spikes made a funny a couple weeks back when he said he had "kissed and made up with the 'Hoodie.'" But there will be no further kissing in and around Gillette Stadium between the two.

In fact, Spikes' NFL career is now very much in jeopardy. He'll likely sign on with another NFL team to a "last-chance deal," but one more slip-up and he's done when it comes to playing on Sundays.

Spikes seemed genuinely happy to be back in the Patriots "family." He was glowing last month at another opportunity with the reigning Super Bowl champs.

"It's the Patriot Way," Spikes said. "It obviously works and I am just glad to be part of it and get another opportunity to prove I can play here and hold myself accountable to my teammates and coaches. I just want to prove them right."

"I'm definitely fortunate for the opportunity Bill gave me and sometimes you need that separation and it kind of makes you more appreciative and thankful."

The love-in continued right up until last week when Spikes tweeted out a picture of himself and Tom Brady on June 6, saying, "Good time last night with the Goat!! #GoPatriots #Patriots #PatriotsNation."

NBA

Disrespected Cavs have Finals tied

The "greatest of all-time" debates will end abruptly if LeBron James can pull this one off.

Hours after his team was left for dead in the 2015 NBA Finals upon hearing the news that second-fiddle Kyrie Irving was done for the rest of the playoffs, James put together a masterful stat line of 39 points, 16 rebounds and 11 assists in a stunning Game 2 overtime victory over the Warriors in Oakland.

The series now shifts to Cleveland for Game 3

Tuesday (9 p.m., ABC) with the Cavs surprisingly holding home court advantage.

Golden State, widely considered one of the top regular-season teams in NBA history given its 67-15 record, saw its odds of winning the championship series triple when it was learned that Irving would need surgery on his broken left kneecap. But James and the Cavaliers, as they have been doing ever since Kevin Love dislocated his shoulder against Boston way back in late April, have defied the odds.

Undrafted point guard Matthew Dellavedova had the Warriors in Dellavedova-denial after Game 2 as Stephen Curry and Shaun Livingston brushed off the defensive impact that the Australian sensation had. When asked if Dellavedova did anything special Sunday night, Curry said, "Nothing really just besides playing their game plan and playing defense like every pro is supposed to. Not giving up on any possession. ... I doubt this will happen again."

Livingston was even more blunt when asked what kind of impact Dellavedova had defensively.

"Not much," Livingston

Stephen Curry went 5 for 23 from the floor in Game 2. GETTY IMAGES told CBS. "I'm not saying he's a bad defensive player. But Steph can pretty much get any shot he wants on you and he's made some huge shots in these playoffs. So we're not as worried about that as we are the team offense."

In the end, it will likely come down to James and Curry. If the Warriors can keep James under 35 points, something they weren't able to do in Games 1 or 2, they will likely emerge victorious. If the Cavs can once again do the impossible and keep Curry in check from the floor, they will likely emerge victorious. MATT BURKE

E-Rod starts for Sox

After an off-day Monday, the Red Sox get back to work today in Baltimore as they will face the Orioles (7 p.m., NESN). Boston's newest pitching sensation, Eduardo Rodriguez (0.61 ERA), will look to up his record to 3-0 while Miguel Gonzalez (5-4, 3.54 ERA) is slated to pitch for the O's. The Sox, now owning a 27-31 record on the year thanks to a three-game win streak, face an Orioles (26-30) team that has also struggled to find consistency.
